I'm doing a project on the entertainment industry around the world. Could you tell me about a popular TV programme in your country? I'd like to know why you think this programme is popular, who it's mainly for, and whether you think it will continue to be popular in the future?

Thanks!

Write your letter.

Question

Dear Rodney,

I am writing to ~~you~~ talk to you about ~~the~~ a popular TV programme in ~~my~~ my country. The programme is called "8 escalones" which means "8 steps" in English. This programme is televised by a local channel called "Canal Trece" on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays and is hosted by a man named Guido Kaczka. "8 steps" is a trivia programme where you compete against two famous politicians. Basically what you do is play against one of the politicians, which have a lot of knowledge, that you chose and the host gives you a ~~question~~ multiple choice question. If you answer the question right and the politician also answers it right, you move up one step. If you answer right but the politician doesn't, you move up two steps. If you answer wrong and the ~~public~~ public servant answers right, you move down one step and finally, if both of the people answer wrong, you stay in the same place. When you get to the eight step you start winning money and to win the jackpot, which is $50,000 pesos, you have to answer the question right and the public servant wrong, but be careful because if you answer 3 questions wrong you're out of the game.

In my opinion, I think this programme is popular because, even though you're not in the game, you get to compete with a family member or with all your family and you learn new things from watching it. Plus you put your knowledge to the test. The good thing is that it will continue to be popular in the future because people don't get bored of these types of games and they like to compete and learn new things.
